The University's affordable housing for students

(A)The University Campus:

The university city sector is one of the strengths of Assiut University, as it includes about 30 buildings dedicated to housing expatriate male and female students. It is one of the largest university cities at the level of Egyptian universities, and this is met with the university administration's keenness to develop what the sector provides in terms of social services for expatriate students to extend to sports, recreational, and artistic services, so that it is not limited to housing services only.

The university campus offers a vibrant and inspiring environment designed to enrich the academic and social life of its students. With its spacious green areas, modern lecture halls, fully equipped laboratories, and specialized learning centers, the campus provides an ideal setting for exploration and innovation. Students can enjoy a wide range of facilities, including libraries, sports complexes, cultural centers, and student activity spaces that encourage creativity and collaboration. The university is committed to maintaining a safe, welcoming, and supportive atmosphere, ensuring that every student can thrive both academically and personally.

One of the buildings- for boys- includes 170 rooms and is divided into two sections, one for male students and the other for female students and is equipped with a social club for each of them. He pointed out that the work to raise the infrastructure efficiency of the building took 6 months, which also included completing the replacement and renovation work and furnishing it with new furniture and television screens on each floor, at a total cost of exceeding 2.5 million pounds.

(B) Assiut University hostels are keen to provide the highest quality of comprehensive services and care for all male and female students, with special attention to students with special needs. This approach reflects the University's humanitarian and social role in supporting and empowering them to achieve full integration into university life.

Below is a summary of the key services:

- The university hostels offer full financial and moral support for students with special needs. This includes specially equipped accommodation that meets their mobility and accessibility requirements to ensure comfort in their living spaces.
- The hostels also provide a safe and inclusive environment, full care, sports, cultural, and religious activities, and free meals for these students. Two residential units are allocated for students with special needs, with a total of 59 students.

The hostels have also designated Unit (B), the premium unit, fully equipped with the necessary facilities for comfort, and Unit (C), which accommodates some students with special needs from various faculties.

- University hostels accept students from within and outside the governorate without discrimination or distance restriction, ensuring equal opportunities for all.

- Accommodation is also provided for students who wish to reside in specific units according to their preferences, such as Units (Z) and (Ain).
- Furthermore, five residential units are allocated for female students with special needs, comprising 52 students from different faculties (L, M, N, 8, and 16). These units offer an appropriate environment with full financial and moral support, in addition to free meals similar to those provided for male students.
- The hostels also provide financial assistance for special medical cases, where students are exempted from monthly fees after paying the first instalment. Accommodation remains free for the rest of the academic year, reflecting the University's continued care for its students.

Number of students benefiting from accommodation during the academic year 2024 / 2025:

- Male students: 4,168
- Female students: 8,278
